U.S. IS HIT BY TARIFF IN BRITAIN

Bill for Preference on Kingdom's Goods Seems Assured Approval

ECONOMIC UNITY SEEN

Most of Dutiable Items Come from America

London, Nov. 18.—(P)—A preference tariff to unite the Dominions of the British Empire into economic unity, for which Lord Beaverbrook, noted newspaper publisher fought for more than a year, seemed assured today with the passage of the government's tariff measure through its first stages in the House of Commons yesterday.

Lord Beaverbrook demanded during the campaign a policy of free trade within the empire as a means of building up a British economic unity that would be comparable with the United States, between whose states no tariff barriers are known.

In the course of his battles over the issue, the 52-year-old publisher has bitterly attacked Stanley Baldwin, conservative leader and threatened to "smash" the Conservative party.

The bill, as it was pushed through the first stages of House of Commons procedure yesterday provides for special tariff duties, up to a maximum of 100 per cent, for hundreds of manufactured articles imported into Great Britain, most of them from the United States. From this special "anti-dumping" duty the British Dominions would be expected.

Lord Beaverbrook began nearly two years ago an attempt to organize an empire free trade party to support his theory that the empire free trade party to support his theory that the empire would preserve its unity and prosperity only by adopting a tariff policy which would practically confine its trade within its own dominions.

DRY SLEUTH DIES OF NATURAL CAUSE

BRUISES ON BODY WHEN FOUND DISINTERRED BY MOGULS IN SERVICE

Mansfield, O., Nov. 18.—(P)—Curtis Lysinger, 60, who aided state dry agents in liquor drives in Shelby and Mansfield during the last month, was found dead in his bed last night.

Although Lysinger had been threatened with death and his body bore bruises, corner James K. Biddle said he believed death was due to heart disease. The bruises, the coroner said, after an autopsy probably were received in a fall after the aged undercover worker became ill.

Lysinger, it was reported, helped make "buys" at Shelby and Mansfield liquor resorts.

12 JURORS ACCEPTED IN BURNETT CASE

Mt. Sterling, Ky., Nov. 18.—(P)—Twelve jurors were tentatively accepted by both the prosecution and defense today seventeen minutes after the trial of William Burnett, Harlan county miner charged with murder, had begun in circuit court here.

Burnett's case is the first resulting from labor disorders in the southeastern Kentucky coal fields where several men already have been killed and where Theodore Dreiser and his committee recently investigated what Dreiser termed "a reign of terror." Burnett is accused of having fatally shot Deputy Sheriff Jesse Pace last spring.

Judge Prewitt said he would not order spectators searched when they entered the court room but intimated that if any search were made it would be when the spectators leave.

ECONOMIC QUESTIONS DISCUSSED

Italian Foreign Minister and U. S. President in Conference

DETAILS UNDISCLOSED

Talk Characterized as Purely Informal

Washington, Nov. 18.—(P)—President Hoover and Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy devoted the principal part of their lengthy conference today to economic questions.

Shortly after the conference, Secretary Stimson disclosed that much of the conversation had hinged upon economic problems. The Secretary did not go into detail regarding the discussion, which he sat in upon. He added that a variety of subjects had been talked about, including the coming armament limitation conference at Geneva.

Stimson said a joint statement would be released after Signor Grandi and the President had an opportunity to meet again. This opportunity will be afforded at the White House tonight.

The Secretary said gaps had been left in the Minister's program for further conferences.

The secretary declined to say whether the specific question of the gold standard was brought up.

"There was no agenda in the sense of a written or arranged agenda," Stimson said. "The talk was purely informal in an effort to get a common understanding."

He said the conference conferees found themselves together on many points.

Since Italian statesman speaks fluent English, Stimson said the first meeting required less time than the recent conferences with Premier Laval of France when speech was slowed by the use of interpreters.

The secretary said there was no reading of speeches or notes, but "we talked like three human beings in an informal way."

She was located yesterday at Springfield, where she sought work to earn her passage money home. Lonely, anxious to see her parents but afraid to ask them for passage money because she didn't want to embarrass them, she left the MacDougal home, where she had been a house guest for 14 weeks, to seek work in a strange American city.

A few days at a hotel, a day in a Springfield rooming house and a round of the employment agencies in Springfield was the sum total of her adventure.

She was located through an employment agency with which she had placed her name.

"I guess my adventure is over," was her reply to the kindly police women who awaited her at her rooming house yesterday.

"My folks haven't much money," she said, "and I didn't want to embarrass them; they left the MacDougal home, where she had been a house guest for 14 weeks, to seek work in a strange American city."

Two men were shot and injured seriously, one probably fatally, within a few miles of New Holland, after which one was sent to Mt. Carmel hospital where his condition Wednesday was reported as fair, and the other was sent to his home in Cincinnati.

Apparently the man had an automobile parked nearby, probably at the road crossing the CCC in Madison Mills. He was gone in short order, without a trace of his car being obtained.

The man immediately realized that an attempt had been made to get the currency, so he demanded the remainder and threatened to kill Harper unless it was turned over at once. The currency was then given to the fellow, and he backed from the room, making dire threats of what would happen should an effort be made to follow him.

After a moment's hesitation, Harper turned to the cash register, and gave the man some $7 in change.

DAUGHERTY CASE IS UP THURSDAY

Motion for Leave to File Petition in Error Is to Be Argued

The State's motion for leave to file a petition in error in the Ohio Supreme Court, in the Mal S. Daugherty case, will be argued before the Court Thursday, and the action of the court will determine whether or not the higher tribunal will review the Daugherty case in which the Ninth District Court of Appeals judges set aside the verdict of the Fayette County Common Pleas Court in which Daugherty was found guilty of mishandling funds of the Ohio State Bank and sentence to ten years in the Ohio Penitentiary and to pay a fine of $5,000 and the costs.

Should the Supreme Court grant leave to file the petition in error, the next step on the part of the State's Attorneys, Prosecutor Norman L. McLean and Louis J. Schneider, will be to file the petition with the higher court.

Should the Supreme Court decline to grant leave to file the petition in error, the next step on the part of the State has not been announced. One avenue left open would be to try the defendant on the counts upon which the Appeals Court remanded the cause for a new trial.

BARBECUE NEAR HERE IS ROBBED

Ford coupe owned by Selsor Fenner, was stolen from in front of the Goody Shoppe in Main street. Fenner had left the car running and stepped into the confectionery for a few moments, only to find the car had been stolen when he came out. It bore license number 260-269.

Wednesday forenoon a Ford sedan, driven by Miss Kathleen Davis, teacher in the high school here, was stolen from the curb where she had parked it in Temple street opposite the school grounds.

Two of the robberies, it will be noted, were committed during the daytime. In each instance the key had been left in the lock.

Warning has again been sounded by the police against the practice of leaving keys in an automobile, as the practice is an invitation to the thief to drive off with the car.

All surrounding points have been noticed to be on the lookout for the machines. It is expected that the cars will be picked up in nearby cities.

A man in a Ford car, mode T, stepping into the Gimme Hardware store at South Charleston about 4:30 Tuesday afternoon, during the momentary absence of the proprietor, stole about $25 from the cash register and escaped.

He is believed to have driven to Jeffersonville and thence to West Lancaster, where he trailed a Chillicothe into Jamestown and stole a new Chevrolet sedan owned by the man, the Chevrolet being found abandoned in this city around two o'clock Wednesday morning.

The Ford in which the robber escaped from South Charleston is said to have borne a Chillicothe license, part of the number being obtained.

RED CROSS FUND MOUNTS SLOWLY

Half of Roll Call Cards to Be Heard from

With approximately one-half of the Red Cross cards used in the annual roll call, still to be heard from, and none of the funds from the townships at large and from the business houses included in the check-up, it was announced Wednesday afternoon that so far about $1500 realized from the drivers had been banked. The goal fixed was $5350.

The complete check-up may require two or three days, it is indicated, and this is expected to greatly increase the amount included in the partial check of the membership cards and donations.

While the amount will be greatly increased, under present indications it is expected to be considerable short of the goal mark.

of what he did, he shot Donaldson. I do not think he was responsible for his action at the time of the shooting and I do not consider him guilty of premeditated murder in any way."

Mother Not Revengeful.

The mother of the dead boy, Mrs. Francis A. Donaldson II of Wynnewood, does not want to see Edward Allen electrocuted. "Taking the life of Edward Allen," Mrs. Donaldson said in a trembling voice, "will not give me back my son. But I do want him punished so that he will never forget the terrible thing he has done."

Her husband, however, called the shooting brutal, premeditated murder.

Frances Serber, of Ardmore, Pa., another person interviewed, is of the same opinion. "To me it seems a case of wilful, deliberate and premeditated murder," she declared, "since Edward Allen drove five miles there and back to get his gun. He certainly had plenty of time to think over what he was doing and what his action meant to the victim, his sister and himself. If he had shot Donaldson in the heat of a fight there would be some excuse. But the way in which it happened seems to me to be unjustifiable. In spite of the unwritten law, the sanctity of the home and the violation of his sister, I would call it first degree murder. I think however, that the verdict will be manslaughter."

On the other hand, Morris Erlick, a young artist whose home is near Green Hill Farms, where the shooting occurred, said, "No, I would not bring in a first degree murder verdict if I were on the jury. From the information I have about Donaldson, he seems to me to have been a bully, always anxious to get into a fight, always eager to punch someone in the jaw."

Entrance was gained by forcing a rear door, and the thieves hauling off bedding, clothing, a clock, 25 cans of fruit, single barreled shot gun, and other property.

Evidence indicated the theft was committed last Saturday night.

Deputy Sheriff Coke Vincent investigated, and followed clues that led him to Thriften, east of Greenfield, but no trace of the stolen property could be found there. The investigation is continuing, however.

Guinea Pigs In Demand As Heat Takes Big Toll

Manhattan, Kas. — (AP) — High mortality among guinea pigs due to last summer's heat wave has brought a sharp increase in demand for guinea pigs from the Kansas State college colony. Requests have been received from institutions and laboratories in several states.

The colony of 1,500 animals kept for the study of genetics is declared to be the largest of its kind in the United States.

LIMA COUPLE DIE IN GAS FILLED ROOM SUICIDE SUSPECTED

Police Find Couple Dead
Sitting in Chairs Facing
Each Other

Lima, O., Nov. 18.—(AP)—The bodies of George Stevens, 60, and his wife, Daisy, 58, said by officials to have ended their lives in a suicide pact, were found in a gas filled room at their home today.

Neighbors and police who forced the doors of the residence said the couple was sitting in chairs facing each other and the gas jets on the stove were open.

A note, addressed to Mrs. Emmanuel Moon, Sidney, a daughter of Mrs. Stevens by a previous marriage, was found in the room by police. It ascribed no reason for the suicides but requested that the bodies be buried at Columbus Grove, near here.

Officials expressed a belief the couple ended their lives because of ill health of Stevens, a war veteran. Stevens received compensation for a tubercular ailment after his discharge as a sergeant in the quartermasters' corps.

Two sons, in addition to Mrs. Moon, survive Mrs. Stevens.

RACKETEERS KILLED

FOUR ASSASSINS WALKED IN TO BROOKLYN CAFE, EX-
CUTE FOES AND ESCAPE UNKNOWN.

New York, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Two rackets packed with tragedy left the Little Court Open Kitchen, in Brooklyn, thick with the smoke of guns early today—and two men dead on the floor.

A motor car drove up in front. Four men got out. They entered the restaurant, and walked quickly toward a table where sat three men.

Four guns blazed in unison. The killers backed out the door, covering their retreat with their smoking weapons, got into their car and were lost in the darkness before pursuit could start.

The two slain were: Guglielmo Guica, 28, known as a gangster and recently acquitted of a homicide charge; and Benedetto Ruggiero, 27, concerning whom police said they had no record.

The third man at the table, who apparently saw the killers as they were entering, dropped under the table and crawled out a kitchen door. None of the restaurant workers knew who he was.

LYSINGER'S DEATH TO BE INVESTIGATED

Mansfield, O., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Police investigating the sudden death of Curtis Lysinger, 60, who aided state dry agents in liquor drives, and who was found dead in bed last night, said today they had discovered that Lysinger had been severely beaten a few days ago by one of the persons he caused to be arrested.

After a conference between Prosecuting Attorney G. E. Kalbfleisch and Coroner Dr. James K. Biddle, it was decided to send the stomach of the dead man to the state health department to be tested for poison.

A coroner's verdict in the death has been withheld by officials.

CLUBBER'S VICTIMS IDENTIFY SUSPECT

Youngstown, O., Nov. 18.—(AP)—A man suspected of three attacks on women here and one in Niles during the last week has been identified in two of the cases, police said today.

A 14-year-old girl identified the suspect as the man who lured her to the basement of a school, and the maid in a south side home said he was the man who struck her when she awoke to find him in her bedroom, according to police.

The man also is suspected of clubbing Mrs. Willis Dickey, who has not recovered consciousness since she was beaten last Saturday night.

The suspect, returned here yesterday from Wheeling, W. Va., denies all the attacks but admits he has spells in which he does not know what he is doing, police said. No charges have been filed yet.

BRITISH LABOR LEADER URGES MINERS TO ACT

Merthyr, England.—(AP)—The next 12 months will decide the future of Britain's languishing coal industry, believe A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation.

"The times call for bold thinking to plan ahead, regardless of all who stand in the way," Cook told a miners' meeting here.

"Do not allow our hatred of the cruelty and callousness of capitalism to blind us to our duty."

Denounces Capitalism

Eliminate capitalism in all its forms by all means, but do not let us destroy our industrial fabric at the same time.

"We must save British industry from capitalism by demanding reconstruction of our whole industrial life."

"All must unite to rescue this great coal industry from bankruptcy. Work, hours and wages are an economic trinity. Our task is the greatest of the century and it needs a co-ordinated constructive plan on scientific lines, nationally and internationally."

Ask Nationalized Mines

"Our immediate program is work and wages. The next 12 months will decide our future and the future of the industry."

"Nationalization of mines, minerals and by-products we must have, but we must fit ourselves also for the task of running this great industry with a proper, unified centralized plan."

"The chaotic state of our industries, and the needs of the country and the poverty of the people surely provide the state's opportunity."

An annual saving of $700,000 would be effected by the salary reduction bill proposed in the Mississippi legislature.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 18.—(AP)—A man suspected of three attacks on women here and one in Niles during the last week has been identified in two of the cases, police said today.

A 14-year-old girl identified the suspect as the man who lured her to the basement of a school, and the maid in a south side home said he was the man who struck her when she awoke to find him in her bedroom, according to police.

The man also is suspected of clubbing Mrs. Willis Dickey, who has not recovered consciousness since she was beaten last Saturday night.

The suspect, returned here yesterday from Wheeling, W. Va., denies all the attacks but admits he has spells in which he does not know what he is doing, police said. No charges have been filed yet.

R. and Mrs. George W. Darlington entertained their annual game supper, Tuesday evening, at their very attractive country home on the Good Hope road. The home and the long dining room table were decorated prettily with a profusion of Fall flowers.

After the plates were filled cafeteria fashion from the long table, places were found at small tables throughout the living rooms. The pheasant and rabbit were supplemented by delicious supplementary delicacies and the supper hour was prolonged in its congenial pleasure.

Games, music and visiting occupied the evening following. This annual supper, which assembles neighbors and friends of the Good Hope community, has come to be anticipated with a great deal of pleasure.

Included in the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Darlington, Mary Katherine Hartley, Mrs. Louise Sanderson, from this city, Mr. and Mrs. Russell McCoy, daughters, Melba and Geraldine, and son, Russell, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Lyle and daughter, Helen, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Smith and daughter, Charlene, Mrs. Lena Backenstoe, Mrs. Barbara Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Perry and daughter, Juanita, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Thornton, sons, Darrell and Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Eric L. Parrott, son, Noah, Mrs. Ella Butcher.

A small but enthusiastic number of people assembled at the Sunnyside school building on Tuesday evening for the November meeting of the Sunnyside Parent-Teacher Association. Mrs. Mildred Fogel presided at the business meeting which preceded the program. Communications were read by Miss Marie Hughes, secretary of the Association, and the report of the treasurer was read by Mrs. Olive Sprenger. The banner for the highest per cent of parents in attendance was won by Mrs. Hazel Davis' third grade. The president announced as the welfare committee for the winter Mrs. Olive Sprenger, chairman, Mrs. Hazel Davis, Mrs. Worley McMurray, Mrs. W. J. Smith, and Mrs. Joe Richardson. Miss Ethel Arnold, chairman of the membership committee reported that the drive has not been completed. Mrs. Fogel also announced the meeting of the P. T. A. Council which will be held on Wednesday evening and to which all members of standing committees are invited. The association voted to rescind its offer to the Keystone View Co. to sponsor the payment for a lantern previously purchased by the school.

The program of the evening was presented by Mrs. Olive Sprenger, program chairman. Mrs. Nelle Ferneau read a comprehensive paper on "Teaching Children to Tell the Truth," which was replete with valuable suggestions to both parents and teachers. The real young child can not distinguish between truth and falsehood. What is a falsehood to us may be absolutely the truth as the child sees it. The observation and judgment of even an older child can not be depended upon, and parents should gently lead the child to distinguish truth from falsehood, and should never scold, shame or threaten. It is well to remember that older persons who are heroes to the children, often find it temporarily convenient to tell what is not altogether true, and children know this.

Mrs. Louise McMurray read a splendid paper on "Why Home Work?" which elicited much discussion. All of the teachers present gave their viewpoint as did many of the parents.

The president announced that a Question Box will be a feature of all future meetings during the winter and also a Food Supply Box to which all are requested to contribute.

Principal A. A. White announced that arrangements for the operetta, "Goldilocks' Adventure," are almost completed. There will be a matinee for children on Tuesday afternoon, November 24, at 3 o'clock.

The evening performance will begin at 8 o'clock. There will be no additional charge for reserved seats and the pit is now open at Rodecker's. The proceeds of this entertainment will be for the benefit of the Sunnyside school.

Mrs. Frank Dellinger and Mrs. Lars Hard were the social chairmen and they served delicious refreshments.

The Bloomingburg community is receiving with surprise the announcement of the marriage of Robert Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Foster, of Bloomingburg, to Miss Mildred Bower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ora E. Bower, of Columbus. The ceremony was performed by Reverend O. W. Robinson, Methodist Episcopal minister, at his home in Newport, Kentucky, on Friday, November thirteenth. The single ring service was witnessed by the minister's wife and Frederick Deering, a chum of the bridegroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster will remain with the bridegroom's parents until Spring, where they are receiving felicitations from friends galore. Both bride and bridegroom are extremely young and are high school juniors.

William Grantham, of Wilmington, Ohio, and Los Angeles, California, well known to the younger set of this city, has entered the Pharmacy College of Ohio State University and has been given an enthusiastic reception there, best told in the feature story appearing in Wednesday's edition of a Columbus newspaper.

From movie thrills to drug store pills, from choristry to chemistry, is the path of William Grantham, composer of "Leven Thirty Saturday Night" and "Sing Another Chorus, Please," who has entered Ohio State University college of pharmacy.

and because it has become a family tradition, the boy composer who played in 'Our Dancing Daughters,' 'Red Hot Rhythm' and other pictures, has given up recent engagements at the Embassy Club in Hollywood and movie contracts to pursue his studies. 'To a Lady,' which is being featured over the radio by Morton Downey, is a recent song of Grantham's.

'Coming to college, Grantham has turned collegiate, and his own song, 'A Theta Lady,' has been written especially for the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. He has already started work on a new song which will be used as a theme tune for Strollers Dramatic Society on the Ohio State campus. For a title, Grantham is hovering between 'Strolling With a Stroller's Girl' and 'Queen of Strollers.' He will reorganize the Strollers' hand and direct it for the play, 'Craig's Wife,' at University Hall Chapel, December 3, 4 and 5."

Mrs. John F. Browning is chairman of the Washington Country Club fortnightly luncheon and bridge Friday afternoon, the additional hostesses Mrs. Frank C. Parrott, Mrs. Homer V. Greene, Mrs. Howard S. Harper, Mrs. Belford Carpenter, Mrs. J. Earl Gidding. The hostesses are arranging for a delicious luncheon and a most pleasurable affair. They will appreciate early reservations, so that the number of guests can be gauged and bountiful provision made.

These parties are now given on Friday so as to avoid conflict with a number of clubs scheduled for Thursday, the hostesses hoping that all members will be out.

Mrs. R. E. Browning entertained the East Councillors Club of the D. of A. Tuesday evening for the regular meeting and provided cards to entertain the several husbands accompanying their wives. Following the business session, Music and games were enjoyed.

The pleasures were brought to a close with the serving of delicious refreshments.

The Browning Club held its regular session Tuesday evening with the History Department presenting the program.

Miss Maurine Wilson played a most expressive piano solo, "Goin' Home" from Largo. New World Symphony by Dvorak. "Westward under France and England" was very thoroughly developed by Miss Minnie Hannum. Mrs. Mae S. Rodgers gave a very interesting paper on "Settling the Mississippi Valley." A comprehensive treatment of "Winning the Far West" was given by Mrs. Edna Woodmansen.

The program was both interesting and instructive.

A game dinner assembled at the home of Mr. Raymond Scott, and family in Bloomingburg, Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Martin G. Morris, daughters, Theresa and Nelle, Mrs. Mary Scott, Mrs. Edna Gale and daughter, Mary; Dr. L. G. Morton and wife, of New Vienna; Mrs. Maude Howland, Miss Jessie Morris, Miss Lora Buchholz and Mr. Vernon Scott.

The men of the party brought in the game, an annual custom which always means a big dinner. Besides the huge platters of deliciously cooked game, there were all accessories for an appetizing dinner. The entire evening was very jolly.

Men of the Washington Country Club anticipate each fortnight the Friday evening smoker, with supper at half past six o'clock, and an evening of cards and social good time.

Friday night of this week Mr. Edgar Snyder is chairman and promises the men a supper which will appeal to their appetites as well as a jolly good time. Mr. Snyder asks men who expect to attend to give him their reservations.

The regular meeting of the League of Women Voters will be held at the Federated Club rooms on Thursday afternoon, November 19, at 3 o'clock. Miss Edith H. Gardner will be in charge of the program and The World Court will be the subject of discussion and study. Mrs. Ormond Dewey will be the social chairman and an afternoon tea will follow the program.

The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting and take part in the study.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Cochran entertained at dinner, Monday, Mr. Robert Whaley, Mr. James Westendorf and Mr. Charles Pleesinger, of Dayton; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jenkins, of Highland; Mr. John Knewell and Mr. Walter Knewell.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Davis and their family have had as guests during the past week Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hansford Jr., Miss Marie Hansford and Miss Hazel Jones, of Wilming, and Mr. and Mrs. Clell Davis and son, of Milledgeville. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Davis were also guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hansford in Wilmington, for a dinner entertained in honor of Mr. Davis' birthday.

LIVING AND LOVING

BY VIRGINIA LEE

Washington C. H., Ohio.

"DEAR MISS LEE: I have a hard problem to solve and thought I would write to you for advice. I am a girl about 16 years of age. I have been going with a young man a few years older than I am. I have been going with another boy and he has been married and divorced. Virginia, the boy I have been going with treats me like a queen." The other one has tried to get smart a couple of times, and I told him the way of it. Do you think as young as I am I should go with this one boy only? My parents think I should go with the first one that comes first. Please answer my letter right away for I want your advice. I read your column daily.

LONELY: At sixteen years of age it is very hard to know who one likes and who one doesn't. Personally, I would not try to decide between the two boys that you mention. You should have a number of boy friends at your age and go places with all of them. I believe that a boy who has been married and divorced and then takes the attitude that your friend does, possibly isn't the best kind of person for one of your age to run around with.

Lonely, if the first boy you mention is so nice to you, why not go with him when he asks you and then also make friends with both boys and girls your own age and see if you wouldn't enjoy yourself more, for really as young as you are you shouldn't have to make a choice. There really shouldn't be any.

THURSDAY NIGHT. DEAR DIARY: I don't know yet how I managed to tell Paul I didn't care for him. You know that. Perhaps Paul knew better—but he didn't let on.

Never have felt so alone. In all these weeks I've been in New York I have never felt so friendless. No matter what disappointments I have during a day of job hunting or divorced. Virginia, the boy I have been going with treats me like a queen.

MUSIC FROM CUBA COSTS $5066 WHEN IT IS RADIOPAINTED

Orchestra Paid $66 but Cable Charges to U. S. Add $5,000 to Bill

New York—It cost $5,066 in cable charges, to get $66 worth of Cuban music from Havana to New York last Saturday evening. The occasion was a radio presentation of dance music by the Lucky Strike Dance Hour, and the music was furnished by the famous Siboney Orchestra, playing from Havana. While considered the finest orchestra of its kind in Havana, it only cost the station $66.

In order that the music of the Siboney Orchestra might be broad-

OHIO AN ICE CREAM PRODUCING STATE

Ohio is one of the leading states in the Union in the manufacture of ice cream, a survey just completed reveals. Pennsylvania heads the list, being followed by New York, Illinois, California, Ohio, and Michigan. Incidentally, these six states manufacture a little more than half of the ice cream consumed in the United States.

The survey just made shows that Ohio has 179 main manufacturing plants, 26 manufacturing branches and 27 distribution stations. More have been licensed by the state, but their output is insignificant.

Washington C. H. is listed as one of the chief ice cream manufacturing cities of the state.

FAREWELL SERVICES LARGELY ATTENDED

Farewell services for Silas M. Taggart, former banker of Jeffersonville, held at his late home in the western edge of Jeffersonville, Monday afternoon at two o'clock, were largely attended by a large number of relatives and friends, who filled the house, veranda, and stood reverently about the lawn during the services.

Rev. J. H. Weaver, former pastor of the M. E. church at Jeffersonville, conducted the services, paying a beautiful tribute to Mr. Taggart, and reading favorite hymns of the deceased.

Flowers in great profusion and beauty filled the room about the casket, coming from relatives, friends, business associates, and fraternities.

Interment was made in the Fairview cemetery. The pallbearers were the three sons, Charles, Joseph and Dana Taggart, son-in-law Justin Owens, and two nephews, Harold Hodges, and Virgil Bowers.

You needn't tell me
—I know Camel is the fresh cigarette!

Milder because they're fresh CAMELS are never parched or toasted!

FOLKS who smoke really fresh cigarettes made from choice sun-ripened tobaccos never have to give a thought to their throats.

That's because such fresh cigarettes retain natural moisture—and are gratefully smooth, cool, throat-friendly, mild.

Camels are the fresh cigarette—everyone knows that now—they're blended from the finest Turkish and mild Domestic tobaccos that money and skill can buy.

We would never dream of parching or toasting these choice sun-ripened tobaccos—that would only drive off or destroy the natural moisture that makes Camels fresh in nature's own mild way.

The Camel Humidor Pack protects a fine cigarette fresh with natural moisture—it could do little or nothing to freshen a cigarette that is dried-out or factory-stale.

If you smoke for pleasure, see for yourself what freshness means in mildness and flavor—switch to Camels for just one day—then leave them, if you can!

Ancient and Modern

In far Manchuria where Chinese and Japanese troops are, in reality, at war, while statesmen and diplomats seek to maintain peace and discuss developments and prospects about the council tables, the world is seeing staged perhaps, the last of old time warfare.

Japanese troops massed, ostensibly to protect the Nonni bridge and other railroad property in which Japanese capital has been invested, equipped with modern implements of war, are trying to hold at bay a tremendously large force of Chinese, equipped with old time implements of war.

Cavalry, which was not used to much effect in the world war is in evidence, disastrously, in some instances to the Japanese in Manchurian warfare.

Thousands of Chinese, astride their blocky little horses—ponies we would call them—sweep across the barren plains of that desolate country, in encircling maneuvers, seeking to isolate the Japanese forces from their lines of communication with the rear.

The horse has come into his own once again as man's ally in war. Perhaps it is his last bid for glory on history's battlefields. Japan has arranged to bring up planes and tanks to launch a counter attack and her soldiers are digging in for winter.

The world will watch, with deep interest, the ebb and flow of the tide of battle in Manchuria to determine whether the horse has passed out of war's picture or whether on the wild rugged plains of Manchuria he will prove sufficient to combat and defeat the latest of man's murderous devices.

Nothing in war has been more picturesque than the horse and nothing until the world war has proved more formidable, as a fighting force, than cavalry.

The Publicized Gandhi

Editorially a metropolitan newspaper asks the question: "Is Gandhi a bore?"

That question was inspired by London news dispatches telling how only a handful of people were at the gates of Buckingham Palace when the Indian leader carried out his much publicized threat to visit George III clad only in a loin cloth. The usual curious crowds were not interested.

It might be a little unkind to call Mahatma Gandhi a bore, but it is a fact that he no longer interests London. He came, was seen, but did not conquer. The West has failed to find in him anything more mystical than a little brown man in a loin cloth and shawl sipping goat's milk. He was a curiosity, but interest in curiosities soon lags.

Gandhi may be great in India but he is just another oriental to the British, who ask him to finish his job before coming to London for acclaim. Their position is that all Gandhi has done will mean nothing to his countrymen if he cannot emancipate the fifty million untouchables from the caste system.

Thus there is to be found in India the reason for this disregard of the holy man who was to bring all British imperialism to its knees by the force of his spirit and the power of his moral principles.

Prices Are Down

Nearly one-quarter of the forty-odd millions cut by Secretary Hurley from the War Department's budget for next year is made possible by lower food prices. The army can live for less today than it could last year or the year before. While food prices have dropped more sharply than other commodities, the war department is also saving money on munitions, constructive work, labor and materials.

This applies with equal force to the navy department and with greater or less degree to all other government departments. They can operate on less money without curtailing their activities or cutting their payrolls either through dismissals of wage cuts.

Every citizen also benefits from the lower prices. Food is cheaper whether eaten at home or in restaurants. Rents are lower. Clothing is cheaper. Automobiles and gasoline cost less. Prices in general have dropped enough to take part of the sting from wage cuts and unemployment.

HOOVER KIN'S ARREST JUST A NEWS 'BEAT'

Likened to Story About Coolidge's Mechanical Horse. Not Much but Interesting to Public

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington, Nov. 18.—The incident of President Hoover's brother-in-law's arrest at Santa Monica with 19 pints of liquor in his possession belongs in the same general classification of news, or synthetic news, as the discovery a few years ago of President Coolidge's custom of taking a canter every morning on a wire-and-leather work horse, electrically operated in his bedroom.

The arrest of Mr. Hoover's brother-in-law was of little, if any, more real importance than the news of Mr. Coolidge's devotion to mechanical horseback riding.

Nevertheless, for every person who takes a mild interest in accounts of the latest developments between Japan and China in Manchuria, something like 100,000 folk took an intense interest in full details of the story of Mr. Coolidge's equestrian performances and still take an intense interest in the final outcome of the liquor case against Mr. Hoover's brother-in-law.

And it is a fact that stories of this sort do have a deal to do toward solving the destinies of public men in connection with whose careers they are related. The truth is, they probably are more decisive than the records of political service to the country.

Some of them are helpful; some are hurtful. Some are helpful to one type of politician and hurtful to another type also vice versa.

For example, the mechanical horse yarn at least would not have been damaging to the strenuous T. R., in his day in the White House. Newspaper readers doubtless would have laughed at it, but they would have laughed sympathetically, saying "Good for Teddy," as they did so.

It was not so appropriate an anecdote to be told of the dignified New Englander and Mr. Coolidge knew it, for there is nothing a politician dreads so much as to be made to appear ridiculous. The mechanical horse story could have been tacked onto T. R. without making him appear so, but Mr. Coolidge was afraid it would in his case. He is known to have considered that leak the worst thing that had occurred to him in his political life time.

Mr. Coolidge, however, treated the mechanical horse story exactly as it needed to be treated. Since he could not do otherwise, he treated it as a joke on himself and showed that he was able to appreciate it. It happened that I attended one of his "conferences" with the Washington correspondents a day or so after the episode was broadcast to the nation. "How are you, Mr. President?" asked one of the reporters, as the delegation flocked into the executive private office. Calvin looked at him sourly.

Nothing in war has been more picturesque than the horse and nothing until the world war has proved more formidable, as a fighting force, than cavalry.

Poetry For Today

SONNET

Oh I would not have sorrow hide her face!
Nor smother in her bosom one sweet moon
For joys with which the ruthless years have flown;
Since then that Time has striven to efface
Have found in her new being and a grace,
A nobler music and a purer tone
And rapture, to their younger years unknown,
And a new-lighted glory in her face.

With her I love to be upon the lawn,
At twilight, while the autumn insects sing,
And muse upon the glories that are gone
Or dream of what the coming years may bring.
To me the sunset is more fair than dawn
And autumn far more glorious than spring.

—CLYDE R. PROTSMAN.

ly. Everyone was aware how the tale of his matutinal stunt had disgruntled him. "A little stiff from horseback riding," he squawked in his Cape Cod accent, whereas the correspondents guffawed and agreed that the president could "take it," anyway.

Thus, in the long run, maybe the whole thing actually was beneficial to him.

The arrest of Mr. Hoover's brother-in-law perhaps would have been harder to laugh off, but it might have been done; to give a humorous twist to dry law violations is not altogether an impossibility (except where tragedy is involved) in this era.

Instead, the White House treated the matter seriously, if silently. It did not treat it altogether silently, either.

The intimation was given out that the President's friends were

"incensed" at Brother-in-Law Leavitt's "advertisement" of his relationship-in-law, no matter what his his predicament.

The truth being that, in so far as appears from dispatches, Brother-in-Law Leavitt did not so advertise himself, but simply was known to his neighbors as the husband of the president's sister (as he naturally would be, in his home community.)

LIQUIDATION APPROVED

CLEVELAND CITY FUNDS TO BE USED BY BANKS

Cleveland, O.—(P)—Permitting city depositors to convert several million dollars in government bonds into liquid assets, city council last night passed an ordinance authorizing Cleveland banks to post first mortgages as security on deposits of city funds until next June 30. The action was in line with President Hoover's program to make bank assets as liquid as possible.

It was not so appropriate an anecdote to be told of the dignified New Englander and Mr. Coolidge knew it, for there is nothing a politician dreads so much as to be made to appear ridiculous. The mechanical horse story could have been tacked onto T. R. without making him appear so, but Mr. Coolidge was afraid it would in his case. He is known to have considered that leak the worst thing that had occurred to him in his political life time.

In Ohio History High Spots

BY J. H. GALBRAITH

Fremont, seat of Sandusky county, has borne two names. Lower Sandusky, first and later Fremont, after the "Pathfinder," Gen. John C. Fremont, and might have had another but for the fact that the people chiefly interested in the latter could not agree as to the proper pronunciation of the proposed name.

Across the Sandusky river from Fremont the town of Croghanville had been laid out and was quite a little village. When it was found that confusion was resulting in mail and shipping operations because there were three Sanduskies in the state, Sandusky proper, Lower Sandusky in Sandusky county and Upper Sandusky in Wyandot. It was determined to select an entirely new name for Lower Sandusky.

The historical connection suggested strongly the name Croghan after the gallant young defender of old Fort Stephenson on the site, and it is likely the name of the village on the east side of the river, Croghanville, would have been extended to the city on the other side but for a dispute as to how the name should be pronounced.

The best fitted to speak with authority in the matter declared that General Croghan did not pronounce his name as though it were spelled "Krogan." In fact did not make two syllables of it, but as though it were spelled "Krawn."

If the name were used for Lower Sandusky, therefore, they insisted that it be known and spoken of as "Krawnsville" instead of "Krogansville," which was the commonly accepted pronunciation of the name in the vicinity. The people of Croghanville would not stand for that, so it was dropped and Fremont chosen instead.

The local story out of which this is taken has it that General Croghan was a nephew of Gen. George Rogers Clark; if so, one family gave two very important factors to the development of the Ohio country in the early days.

The intimation was given out

SPEAKING OF AIR CASTLES!

A NEW YORKER AT LARGE

By WILLIAM GAINES

NEW YORK—One of the most romantic figures to tread Broadway in the past moon has been Count Eric von Luckner, German's wartime wolf of the seas.

A strapping six-footer, he has the physique of a pugilist. He wields a wicked tongue in delivering an address, and is quite dramatic with his gestures.

The count's first adventure was to run away from home at the age of 13, to meet the idol of his boyhood, Buffalo Bill.

Instead of shipping direct from Germany to the States, he had to come by way of Australia. That was the only route on which he could find employment as an inexperienced boy.

It took him a long time, jobbing his way over the jumps. When he finally landed in San Francisco, he was told his idol lived in Denver. So he walked the rails to the Colorado capital—only to learn that Buffalo Bill at that moment was appearing in Berlin with his wild west show!

Russia in Transition

An American Newspaperman Sees Russia As It Is Today

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
(Copyright by St. Louis Post-Dispatch and Distributed by Central Press).

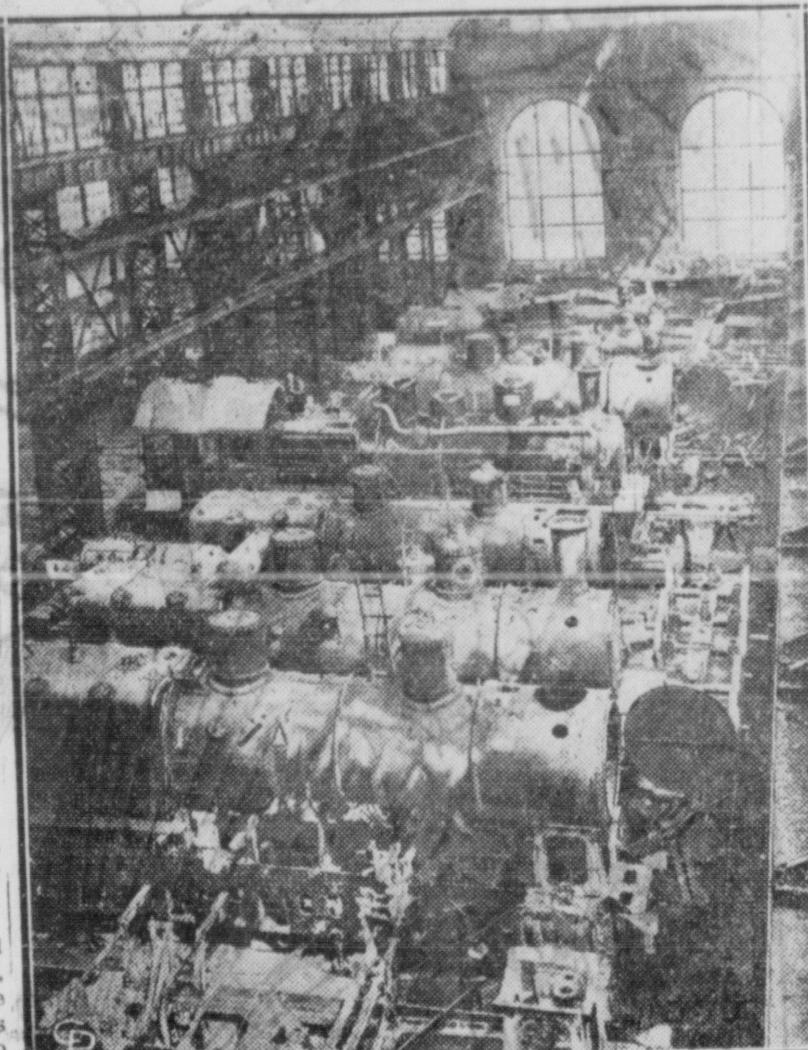

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 18.—The transportation crisis in Soviet Russia has forced the government to retreat from the Communistic ideal of favoring the proletariat at the expense of other classes. Class distinctions are much in evidence on trains and boats. It is the old story of supply and demand. If the supply were adequate, perhaps the proletariat would be privileged. But the supply is inadequate, and the best goes to whoever has the power or can pay the price.

In general the classes on trains and boats are "soft" and "hard" accommodations. I don't know the connotations of these words in Russian but they are inadequate in English. "Hard" accommodations are very hard indeed; "soft" compares with day coaches in the States or third class in England. On the railroads there are also occasionally "international sleep wagons" which compare favorably with the international wagon-lits or American Pullman cars. On boats there are really four to six classes, depending upon the size of the vessel.

Comparisons with Homeland

Many Americans have criticized the Russian transportation system, forgetting that the Russians are decades behind the United States, and that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is more than a hundred years old. In Moscow tourists like to regale each other with tales of their experiences with late trains or how the engine broke down or how slow their journey was. The writer can recall that on the Warsaw (Mo.) branch out of Sedalia not more than 20 years ago the train was stopped to allow the crew to lay in a supply of "roasting ears" from a nearby corn field and there were reports, undoubtedly untrue, that occasionally the crew took time out to go fishing.

The writer can tell some stories of his own along these lines—how the average of the Russian crack trains is about 30 miles an hour and on the branch lines, 13 miles; how the Chelyabinsk train was laid up for three hours for no known reason; how he had to call on the Gay-Pay-Oo for help in getting tickets; how he rode in the porters' compartment from Tiflis to Batum and how the Samara train was seven hours late. These experiences merely proved that the Russian transportation system has a long haul ahead before it can stand favorable comparison with the American system, which now would like nothing better than a car shortage or a Russian rush for passenger tickets.

The Russians take much worse traveling inconveniences as a part of a hard life. They stand in line for hours for tickets and when the ticket window is closed before they are served they retire to their family possessions piled up in a corner. Those fortunate enough to get tickets fight their way through the station doors and fight again for

CARRY BEDDING AND FOOD

The "hard" traveler brings his own bedding or sleeps in his ordinary clothes on the unadorned boards forming the seat, the middle deck and upper deck of the compartment. A thin mattress and pillow can be hired from the conductor but the price is too high for most Russians.

The Russian traveler usually carries his own food and certainly a teapot to get boiling water at the station kippatoks. If food is available at the larger station buffets he must show his railroad ticket before he is allowed to buy. This is to prevent non-travelers from seats. They are glad enough to be able to travel "hard."

Carry Bedding and Food

The "soft" traveler brings his overcrowding the buffets, where prices are comparatively low.

On many of the short lines only "hard" accommodations are available. When the writer was forced to make the trips the railroad Gay-Pay-Oo were extremely helpful. Through their aid the guide was allowed to go at the head of the ticket queue, and we were permitted to board the train before the other passengers. By buying four tickets for two persons we were assured enough space for sleeping. Despite the rule that the coaches must be swept twice daily they are pretty dirty at the end of a journey.

Traveling "soft" is not so inconvenient and the Russian proletariat would be satisfied with such accommodations for a long time.

Unfortunately for the proletariat the prices are high and the places are taken by party members, foreign tourists and government officials, including army officers, engineers, university professors and trade union officials. The seats can be changed into berths, upper and lower, and bedding is obtainable from the conductor.

Many American tourists, particularly women, are shocked to learn that men and women are sold tickets for the same compartments. The Russians have no false modesty. When the women dress the men turn their heads or leave the compartment. The women do the same when the men dress and undress. It is very simple.

The Best Not So Good

The Russians are very proud of the "sleep wagons", insisting they are the best in the world. This is a bit far-fetched, for although they are bigger than the European war-on-tours compartments and have more baggage space, they are inferior to the Internationals on the German Nord Express or the French Blue Train to the Riviera and are not as convenient as the stateroom trains out of New York and Washington. My guide, who had not seen a foreign de luxe train for 15 years, would not admit that any foreign trains could be as good as the Russians. His faith was an example of the effectiveness of Russian propaganda.

On their crack train, the Trans-Siberian, the Russians are slowly strangling a golden-egg goose by giving bad service. In Moscow and Berlin are large posters announcing that one can travel across Russia first-class on the Trans-Siberian for $250. This year and last year the writer talked to many who made the trip—mostly British and Scandinavians—and all swore they would not make the trip again, although they could save four weeks on the trip from China. Their principal objections were on the score of dirt and the lack of food.

The less the Russians say about dining-car service the better. Even on the crack train the choice is greatly limited and the prices extremely high.

ACCOMMODATIONS ON BOATS

The Volga boats have four classes and the Black Sea vessels have six. First and second classes on the Volga boats are "soft" and third and fourth are very "hard." The writer found second class on one Volga boat better than first because the first-class cabins were infested with bed bugs, while there were comparatively few in the second class section. He also decided that if he had to choose between third and fourth he would take fourth. The third-class passengers were crowded in an ill-smelling room and slept on plain wooden bunks. The fourth class passengers could sleep on the lower decks, where there was fresh air. A hard deck would be preferable to a closed room filled with odors of human flesh, dried fish, boiled cabbage and onions.

The difference in prices for the various classes is quite wide. Second class tickets cost 38 roubles, $19 for one stretch of the trip. First class tickets probably were more than 50 roubles, $25. Fourth class tickets for the same journey were only 6 roubles, $3.

The six classes on the Black Sea vessels are first, second, and third and deck space for each of these. The result is that three vessels are packed and the first-class passengers have a difficult time finding a place to sit on deck.

This much must be said for the water carriers. The food is fairly good for Russia, particularly on the Black Sea boats. This is because they draw on the Caucasus and Crimea for supplies. The regions drained by Mother Volga are not as rich as the southern districts.

HOPING FOR THE BEST

Just as the Russians travel from one part of the country to another hoping for better living conditions they are hoping that the transportation system will be improved. The government realizes that without transportation the Soviet Union must continue to lag behind other countries and is promising the people that sometime there will be enough passenger trains for all and that freight trains and river vessels will solve the food and goods shortage.

An American engineer at Dniepropetrovsk said that he overheard a peasant and his wife talking about Col. Hugh L. Cooper's private car as it stood at the station at Kichkas. This private car was lent to Cooper by Voroshilov, the People's Commissar for War and Navy.

"What a wonderful way to travel!" said the wife. "Wouldn't it be fine if we could use it instead of going 'hard'?"

"Be quiet," replied the peasant. "We'll have such a car when the five-year plan is finished."

Many American tourists, particularly women, are shocked to learn that men and women are sold tickets for the same compartments. The Russians have no false modesty. When the women dress the men turn their heads or leave the compartment. The women do the same when the men dress and undress. It is very simple.

CHAPTER 32

BRUCE got out of his car and swung through the narrow gate that hung loosely on its hinges in front of the house that had the numbers six one two over its doorway. He had no hat, merely his top coat which was unbuckled and which flew open as he walked up the worn cement steps.

Mrs. Bailey decided to wait. Unless of course it was a salesmen of some sort. In that case she would hurry on, but in some manner she decided that this fellow wasn't selling anything.

"Mrs. Corbin?" he queried.

He had such a nice voice, Mrs. Bailey thought. She spoke right up with her most delightful smile. "Yes, that is Mrs. Corbin," she said waving her hand toward the doorway.

Bruce went on past her and stepped up to Mrs. Corbin.

"I'm Bruce Durand," he said. "I came to ask about Lois. I heard that she was ill."

Mrs. Corbin was embarrassed. This evidently was a friend Lois had met while she was living away from home. And here I am in a common old gingham apron, Mrs. Corbin thought. Thank heavens it was clean! Mrs. Corbin ushered Bruce inside and brought up a chair for him.

"Sit down," she said pleasantly. "You've come right at a time when I'm dreadfully busy. On account of Lois not being able to go down to the office this morning I just dropped all my work and took care of her."

"How is she?" Bruce pressed again.

"She's asleep now. She isn't terribly sick," Mrs. Corbin went on. "It's just that living away from home that didn't agree with her. She's nervous. High strung anyway, and not getting the right sleep and eating at irregular hours has simply been too much for her."

Bruce said, "I'm sorry she's ill." Then he added: "I didn't know that Lois' folks lived in the city."

"I'd like to see Lois, if I may," Bruce requested. "That is, if she isn't too ill."

Mrs. Corbin shook her head. "My, my," she said, "she isn't too sick to see you, except I'm afraid she's asleep. I left her just a few minutes ago and she was asleep then. I don't like to waken her."

"No, don't do that," Bruce hastily agreed. "I just thought I'd drop in to see how she was getting along."

"You can wait until I run upstairs and see, though," Mrs. Corbin hurried to say. "It's just possible that she is awake and I know she'll be disappointed if I tell her one of her friends was here to see her and I didn't come up to tell her about you."

Bruce sat down again while Mrs. Corbin hurried up the thinly carpeted stairs. He could hear her feet moving on the floor above him. Then he heard the crackling of a door. How strange, he thought to himself that it had to take all this to jar him to his senses. Think of all the sorrow he must have caused her! Margaret was right. He wouldn't blame Lois at all if she even refused to see him. Oh, but she couldn't do that! She wouldn't deny him the right to see her, to offer her his explanation at least.

His heart bounded as he heard Mrs. Corbin coming down the stairs again.

He thought of a thousand things all at once. That Lois was awake but wouldn't see him, that she was asleep but he couldn't see her until later, and he wanted to see her now, so badly.

Why was it that people had an inferiority complex concerning their homes? Bruce wondered. His own home had been no better than Lois'. His uncle had told him many times that his own father had not been able to catch the knack of making money.

"She's awake," Mrs. Corbin said.

Bruce thought Mrs. Corbin had the sweetest smile he had ever seen, with one exception, of course. He saw now where Lois got her lovely smile. "I told her that there was a friend of hers to see her and she wants you to come right up."

Bruce motioned silently for Mrs. Corbin to come closer to him. Wonderingly she obeyed.

"Did you tell her my name?" Bruce asked in a whisper.

Mrs. Corbin shook her head. "I didn't remember it. I don't remember her names very well. I just told her you were a friend."

Bruce was happy of that. Perhaps Lois had known who he was, but he wouldn't have gotten a chance to see her. He hoped Mrs. Corbin wouldn't follow him upstairs. He desired to be alone with Lois. He desired to tell her now, unrestrainedly, everything that was in his heart. He desired to ask her to forgive him and he couldn't do all that with her mother there in the room.

"Come right this way," Mrs. Corbin said as she turned and started up the stairs. Bruce had to follow her. There was no way out of it.

"I hate to cause you all this bother," he began slowly.

"No bother at all," Mrs. Corbin answered quickly. "Any friend of my daughter's is a pleasure, not a bother."

Bruce kept his eyes on the narrow stairs and followed Mrs. Corbin. At the head of the stairway a little room came into view. Bruce did not observe that its cretonne curtains were faded and old or that the pink and yellow rosebuds on the wallpaper were almost white from the passing of years. So far as he was concerned there was not an article of furniture in the entire room. The only thing he saw was the girl he loved lying there on the bed.

He went over to her and took her hand. She looked pale lying there against the dead whiteness of the pillow.

"Hello," he said bashfully. Lois lifted her eyes slowly to meet his.
